SPEAKERS FOR THE 4TH SELECTED

Joint Committee in Charge of Celebration Decides on Speakers for the 4th. of July. Line of Parade is Given.

Three committees, consisting of R. E. Coulson, John Goodermuth and Wm. McG. Tawney for the Sons of Veterans; Gervis Meyers, John Aughinbaugh and Robert Paxton for the P. O. S. of A.; and O. H. Lupp, C. B. Kitzmiller and John McDonnell for the I. of O. A. comprising the joint committee which has charge of the arrangements for the 4th of July celebration met Tuesday evening in the lodge rooms of the P. O. S. of A. and decided upon a number of the features of the ceremony.

Invitations will be extended to Prof. J. Louis Sowers to conduct the exercises, and to Judge S. McC. Swope and Hon. Geo. J. Benner to deliver addresses on Center Square. Each of the three organizations that are represented in the other county towns by lodges will receive a formal invitation to participate in the parade within the next few days. It is expected that few, if any of them, will refuse, they will also be requested to urge the several towns that have bands to join the line.

The town fire company and the Grand Army Post have already given assurance that they will take part. Many of these bodies will be in uniform and the parade should make an excellent showing.

Marshals and aides have not yet been selected but the parade will move as follows:

Form in line at the Meade High School building and come East to Chambersburg street to Center Square, on York street to Liberty, to Middle street as far as Franklin, and then to High street and on Washington as far as Breckenridge. From Breckenridge to Baltimore and on to Center Square where they will be reviewed by the speakers and assembled guests. They will then move on Chambersburg street to Washington, to Middle, to Baltimore, and be massed in the Square for the exercises.

WILL BE AT HAGERSTOWN

Mr. Biedersdorf will go to Maryland Town.

Dr. W. E. Biedersdorf, evangelist, who converted Waynesboro will come to Hagerstown, either the first part of November or January. Three Hagerstown ministers, Rev. George B. Townsend, Rev. A. B. Statton and Rev. C. L. Pate, a committee sent by the Bible Class Union of that city met the evangelist at his offices in Philadelphia.

He has an engagement for a six weeks meeting in Watertown. He sent a telegram to Watertown, expressing his desire to cancel his engagement there, and set it there for a later date. If this town consents, Biedersdorf will be in Hagerstown for a six weeks meeting in November.

Dr. Biedersdorf when in Waynesboro expressed some opinions of Hagerstown, and declared that the only difference between Hell and Hagerstown was the railroads. A large tabernacle will be erected to accommodate the crowds.

SITE FOR CHAUTAUQUA

Directors Decide to Hold Meeting again on Prep Campus.

Preparatory campus was the site selected by the directors of the Chautauqua over the other available situations at a meeting held in the Court House Tuesday evening. It was decided to erect the big tent there because the attending crowds would have more room than at any of the other possible sites. At the same time it is considered more accessible than the other places.

The matter of the ticket sales was discussed and although the state association will send one of their regular canvassers here it was suggested that a concentrated effort be made by the local people interested in the welfare of the project to distribute tickets over the entire county on several days to be set apart for that purpose.

Automobiles carrying advertising bills and posters will reach here next week and the county will then be placarded with these signs. In conjunction with the other advertising features an effort will be made to conduct an automobile booster's run to the various nearby towns similar to the one held last year.

PEN-MAR OPENS ON SATURDAY

Prof. John Bohl's Orchestra will again be attraction for Dancing. Odd Fellows Reunion Expected to be larger than ever.

The regular opening of Pen-Mar will be held on Saturday, June 20th, when there will be a big excursion from Connellsville and points along the new extension of the Western Maryland Railway, under the auspices of Gasters Military Band of Connellsville, which promises to be one of the biggest of the season, as it will be the first opportunity of residents of that territory to visit the resort by a reduced excursion rate.

The band numbering 50 pieces, will give delightful concerts afternoon and evening and all the new features of the park will be in full blast. These will include many innovations and improvements, which will prove pleasing to visitors throughout the season.

The big open air dancing pavilion, will be replete with new floor, enlarged orchestra, directed by Prof. John Bohl. The electric lighting will be more brilliant than ever before, new wiring and additional lights having been specially installed.

Because of the interest that is being manifested by the order in the five jurisdictions and the increased railroad facilities, the indications are that the fifth annual reunion of the Odd Fellows of Maryland, Pennsylvania, Virginia, West Virginia and the District of Columbia at Pen Mar on Thursday, August 6, will eclipse that of last year, which was attended by 18,000 to 20,000 persons. The program for the day will consist of band concerts, morning and afternoon; drills and a short parade by the cantons of the patriarchs militant.

ARRESTED IN CARLISLE

Former Colored Citizen of Gettysburg in Trouble at Nearby Town.

Charles Powell, colored, of Carlisle and a former resident of Gettysburg, pleaded guilty to assault on oath of his wife. Sentence was suspended, and he entered $100 recognizance to appear at November sessions. Powell is the man who required three men to put him in the county bastille on the evening on which he was arrested.

BARN RAISED

Big Crowd Attends Barn Raising of Robert Witherow.

Over one hundred people helped raise the frame of a large new barn on the farm of Robert Witherow, between Barlow and Greenmount this morning. The structure when complete will cover a space of 40 x 70 feet. Mr. Witherow found his old barn inadequate for his increasing crops and decided some time ago to supply himself with a new one.

EXCURSIONS HIT BY NEW LAW

Heretofore Organizations Conducting Trips from Place to Place could Hire Train and charge what they Pleased. Can't do it Now.

Excursions via the Reading and Western Maryland railways this summer will likely be interfered with by the public service law enacted at the last session of the legislature. In booking organization's excursions formerly the railroad companies allowed them to make their own selling rate, but under the present law this will no longer be permitted. The rate must be on a uniform mileage basis and filed with the public service commission.

Parties at the head of several excursions which were booked for this summer were unable to comply with the new conditions and have given up the idea of running them. This rule does not only apply to local organizations, but is general throughout the state. Sunday school excursions have not been affected to any extent. They, as a rule, are not run for profit.

It has been the custom of many societies and organizations for years to get up excursions over the local roads to points in this state, Maryland and Virginia. They guaranteed the railroad company the sale of a certain number of tickets, which the organization disposed of to their patrons at a profit. For instance, the railroad company gave them a rate of 75 cents to a particular point. In return they probably charged a dollar or more and earned the difference. This can no longer be done. On the other hand the railroads continue to conduct cheap excursions. Several of these have been run to Washington, Harrisburg, Pen Mar, Gettysburg and other places.

Another thing covered by the new law is that no "traveling hotels" will be permitted on the railroads. There have been occasions when special excursion parties carried with them quantities of liquid refreshments, which were disposed of on the train. This will no longer be tolerated.

Organization excursions which have been run in the past for profit are the only ones affected. They must abide by the rates furnished by the railroad companies and cannot change them.

PASTOR THRICE HONORED

Rev. John T. Huddle gets Same Degree from Three Colleges.

Rev. John T. Huddle, of Washington, had the unusual distinction last Friday of having the degree of doctor of divinity conferred upon him simultaneously by three wellknown colleges.

He had gone to Pennsylvania College to receive the degree when he learned that Roanoke College, at Salem, Va., of which he is an alumnus, and Susquehanna University, at Selingsgrove, had also given him the degree.

Mrs. Huddle was Miss Virginia O'Neal, of this place. Rev. Huddle has many friends in Gettysburg and frequently visits here with his wife.

SPANISH AMBASSADOR

Will Occupy Cottage at Blue Ridge Summit during the Summer.

Another foreign ambassador will spend his summer on the South Mountain. Argentine Minister Naon's family is at Buena Vista, and the Spanish Ambassador De Pena has leased the Smith cottage, adjoining the Caples cottage at Blue Ridge Summit and his family will occupy it next Saturday.

The Spanish ambassador's family will be accompanied to Blue Ridge Summit by six servants.

HEAVY CONTRIBUTOR

Washington Party Candidate given almost Half of Total Contributions.

The statement of campaign receipts and expenditures filed yesterday at Harrisburg by the Washington party State Committee shows that receipts were $5237.60 and expenditures $1680.34. Gifford Pinchot, candidate for Senator, contributed $2500; Mrs. Charles B. Wood, Washington, $1000; Harry Watson, Greenville, $500, and the balance was received in contributions ranging from $1 to $10 from hundreds of people throughout the State, the bulk of the contributors giving less than $5 each.

TRANSFER POINT FOR EXPRESS HERE

American Express Co. Will Acquire Business Handled by U. S. Company And Use Gettysburg as Transfer Point between East and West.

Official announcement has been made that Gettysburg will be the transfer point for all express matter carried over from the Reading to the Wabash system when the American Express Company assumes the business formerly conducted by the United States Express Company, on July 1st.

The United States Company is at present undergoing the process of dissolution and their business is gradually being acquired by the other large express companies. That part of it which was formerly carried by the Reading road has been assigned to the American company. The only means of ingress to Philadelphia and New York from the West and South for the American company is over the Reading system. Likewise all matter shipped by the American company from Philadelphia and nearby Southern cities to Western points will come to Gettysburg and be delivered here to the Wabash system for delivery to all Western towns as far as the Pacific coast.

Shippensburg and Gettysburg are the only two points where the Wabash and the Reading systems converge and Gettysburg was selected as the transfer point because it was the practicable town through which fast trains might be scheduled on the Wabash road. On the other hand, its selection as the transfer point for this express business accounts for the Pittsburgh-Baltimore trains being sent through here.

At present, the train on the Western Maryland from Baltimore to Pittsburgh arriving here at 11:22 p. m. carries three express cars, one of which is transferred at Highfield for the Elkins division. However all matter coming on that train for local consignees is carried through to Hagerstown and returned here the following morning at 9:37. This is explained by the fact that the local office does not have a sufficient force of employees to maintain a night service, and it will continue to be carried that way until the new arrangement goes into effect the first of next month.

By that time it will be necessary to have a twenty-four service here and the number of employees will at least be doubled. While a large part of the business will be contained in cars that can be switched from the tracks of one road to those of the other and this will naturally be done with all through consignments, yet those packages going to nearby towns will not justify the use of a separate car, but will be unloaded here and carried to the train on the other road. For parcels of this sort a storage room will be required immediately adjoining the railroad tracks. It would not be feasible to haul them from the station of the one road to the present office of the Express company and then, after unloading and storing them, take them to the station of the other railroad; neither is it thought that the room now occupied will be large enough for this purpose. Negotiations are said to be under way for the erection of a suitable storage building between the Reading and the Western Maryland stations.

PRESBYTERIANS WIN

Beat the College-Methodist Combination by Score of 8-4.

By the score of 8 to 4 the Presbyterian team defeated a picked team from the Methodist and College Lutheran congregations on Tuesday evening.

The feature of the game was five strike-outs to the credit of Beard, who pitched for the College-Methodist combination. A smaller crowd than the one in attendance Monday evening witnessed the playing. Four dollars and sixty-six cents was the amount of the collection received. To-night's game will be between St. James and the Reformed teams; to start at the regular time, 6:15.

The clubs now stand as follows:

	Won	Lost	P. C.
St. James	1	0	1.000
Presbyterian	1	0	1.000
Reformed	0	0	.000

DAMAGED BY DROUGHT

Crops throughout County need Rain. Had little lately.

As the result of the severe drought in this county, crops are beginning to suffer from the want of rain. Particularly the hay crop has been damaged and with the best possible weather from now on, the crop promises to be less than normal size.

There has been no rain of any consequence in the county since early in May. A drought at this season of the year is unusual and unless showers soon arrive, unestimable damage will be done. So far the fruit crop has not been hurt to any great extent.

ENVOYS CONFER WITH REBELS

Americans Seek Advice of Carranza Delegates.

MOTOR TRIP KEPT SECRET

They Go to Buffalo and Get More Names For Provisional President of Mexico.

Niagara Falls, Ont., June 17.—The American commissioners to the mediation conferences motored to Buffalo to confer with representatives of General Carranza, the Constitutional "first chief."

Nothing was known of their departure from Niagara Falls until about the time they were due to return. They expect to obtain the names of prominent Mexicans whom the Constitutionalists will be willing to have selected as provisional president.

Dr. Dodge, secretary of the American commissioners, made announcement of the trip of Justice Lamar and Mr. Lehmann in a statement, the purport of which was as follows:

"The American commissioners have constantly found themselves in need of information as to the character of persons under discussion for the provisional presidency. In their desire to get this information the American commissioners have for a considerable time been endeavoring to have a conference with the Constitutionalists, and so informed the mediators.

"The commissioners thought they had the opportunity of getting the desired information if they went to Buffalo, and with the consent of their government they decided to make the attempt to obtain it."

Mr. Dodge would not give the names of the Constitutionalists with whom the delegates had arranged to confer.

The "A. B. C." envoys, in a sense, have closed and double-locked the door to the peace parleys against representatives of Carranza. Another development is that the deadlock between the American and the Huerta delegates over the question of the man to be chosen for the provisional presidency is becoming more pronounced.

The first development came as the result of the receipt of Carranza's reply to the recent note of the mediators. To this reply the mediators responded directly to Carranza that only through the granting of an armistice could he enter mediation. This the Constitutionalists so far have flatly refused to do.

The second development followed a two-hour conference of delegates and mediators. When an adjournment was taken until Friday there seemed no possibility of an agreement being reached. In some quarters it was reported that the mediators had intimated broadly that if no progress was made Friday they would bring the peace parleys to an abrupt termination.

The ostensible reason for the adjournment until Friday was to enable Senator Naon, the Argentine minister, to go to Yale and Harvard, where he is to receive honorary degrees, but this break in the proceedings will afford the American and Mexican delegates an opportunity to consult their governments and to meet together and talk matters over informally.

"DECIDEDLY OMINOUS"

Little Hope For Mediation Felt in Washington.

Washington, June 17.—"Decidedly ominous" was the diplomatic characterization here of the outlook for mediation following the rejection by the "A. B. C." envoys of Carranza's delegates.

The note of the mediators sent in reply to that of the rebel "first chief" advising them of his intention to appoint delegates was interpreted by the rebels and officials generally as being the "last word" of the mediators.

Nevertheless, Secretary Bryan was still hopeful of the ultimate success of mediation and still believed the situation would so shape itself that the Constitutionalists would participate in some form.

Government officials were said to have experienced some difficulty in getting names of eligibles through the Constitutionalists' agents in Washington. During the three days' absence of Minister Naon, the president and his advisers hope to make headway that will materially relieve the immediate tension.

Press dispatches from Mexico City saying an extraordinary session of the house probably would be called by Huerta were received with keen interest.

Various interpretations were given to the dispatches, but it generally was supposed the subject of the session would relate to Huerta's attitude that recently has been outlined by his delegates at Niagara Falls.

One report received is that General Felipe Angeles, chief of artillery of the Constitutional army and acting minister of war in Carranza's cabinet, is the nearest approach to the "man of the hour" reached at the peace parleys.

SENATE SPEEDS UP ON WILSON ORDER

Democrats Hear Campaign Cry and Rush Legislation.

Washington, June 17.—With President Wilson insisting upon the enactment of the full program of anti-trust legislation at the present session and the fall campaigns calling lustily for active work, Democratic leaders in the senate inaugurated their plan to rush anti-trust legislation, with the hope of an adjournment in July.

There is every prospect that the senate will pass all the annual appropriation bills by the end of June. As an evidence of the speed it can put on when it desires, the senate has put through the diplomatic and the pension appropriation bills. After the Indian bill is finished only the sundry civil and rivers and harbors bills must be passed. With twelve legislative days remaining this month the prospect that the senate will be clear by that time is good.

According to well-defined reports the Republican senators are convinced that the majority intends to put through anti-trust legislation of the sort it believes is needed.

In order to give the committee handling trust bills more time for work, the senate agreed to meet hereafter until further notice at noon instead of eleven o'clock.

BURGLAR STEALS HER HAIR

Thief Cuts Off Tresses of Young Woman While Asleep.

Titusville, Pa., June 17.—A burglar who entered the home of Miss Margaret V. Graham, twenty-four years old, cut off her hair and carried it away. There is no clue to the culprit.

That the cutting off of the hair was a sudden inspiration is indicated by the fact that a pair of shears owned by the young woman were used. Her hair was sixteen inches long, and the burglar took all except four inches.

The girl didn't awaken then, but learned of the loss of her hair when she awoke several hours later. Several articles of jewelry were also taken.

Camden Appointed U. S. Senator.
Frankfort, Ky., June 17.—Governor McCreary signed the commission of Johnson N. Camden, of Versailles, as United States senator from Kentucky, to fill the vacancy caused by the recent death of Senator W. O. Bradley.

Mr. Camden will serve until November, when a senator will be elected to fill out Bradley's unexpired term, which expires March 4, 1915.

Towne Not a Huerta Man.
Niagara Falls, Ont., June 17.—Emilio Rabasa, of the Mexican delegation, received a cable from Mexico City, in which General Huerta authorized a denial that former Senator Charles A. Towne represented him in any way.

Towne has been mentioned in Washington dispatches as looking after the interests of the dictator in Niagara Falls.

M'CARRICK BOY'S BODY IN RIVER

Found in Delaware and Identified by Clothing.

HE DISAPPEARED MARCH 12

Philadelphia Police Do Not Know If Boy Was Drowned Accidentally or Thrown Into the Water.

Philadelphia, June 19.—The long search for Warren McCarrick, seven years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. James McCarrick, who disappeared from his home here on March 12, was ended yesterday.

Edward McCarrick, a police sergeant, identified the body of a boy taken from the Delaware river as that of his nephew.

The body had been in the river so long that identification could not be established from the features. The only things by which the police could make a positive identification were the underwear, stockings and a garter.

Sergeant McCarrick, who assisted for two months in the search for his nephew, examined the clothing in the morgue for a half hour before he could be certain Warren's father was not permitted to see the body.

Recovery of the body so far from the McCarrick home has given the detectives a mystery to solve. They do not know whether the boy was drowned accidentally, perhaps by falling down an open sewer, or was thrown into the water.

The detectives will renew their search for the writer of two anonymous letters in German. He wrote to Warren's parents and the police that his horse had kicked the boy when Warren tried to get a hoop which lay beneath the horse's hoofs.

There also is a theory that the boy was kidnapped and thrown into the water. A country-wide search had been made for the boy and rewards aggregating $6000 were offered for information leading to his recovery.

Any doubt the detectives had as to whether or not the body was that of Warren McCarrick was dispelled when it was learned that the underwear found on the body is identical with that worn by the missing boy.

The underwear bears the patent name of a brand, two suits of which were bought by the boy's mother shortly before his disappearance. To make the identification more positive it was learned that Mrs. McCarrick had altered both suits by making a tuck in each around the waist. The underwear on the body taken from the river was altered in this way.

LIQUOR DECISION REVERSED

Delaware Court Upholds Right to Ship to Private Consumers.

Wilmington, Del., June 17.—The supreme court of Delaware reversed the judgment of the court below in directing the conviction by a jury of Benjamin S. Van Winkle, an express agent at Smyrna, on a charge of violating the Delaware anti-shipment law by delivering shipments of liquor into "dry" territory.

The constitutionality of the Webb Kenyon federal law in relation to liquor shipments into "dry" territory and the Delaware law is sustained, but judgment is reversed on the ground that the shipments of liquor which Van Winkle delivered were for a lawful purpose—private consumption—and therefore not contrary to the state law.

The court held that it was not necessary to pass upon the decision of the lower court in respect to the federal law.

UNCLE JOE CANNON SMILES

The Outlook For G. O. P. in Fall Is Reason.

Washington, June 17.—"I haven't put up any lightning rod and am not so long to, but I am going to make the campaign," declared Joseph G. Cannon, former speaker of the house, who is a candidate for congress in Illinois.

"None of the boys want to run out in my district," he added. "I told them any one of 'em could be elected this year, but they seem to want me to run."

"I'm not saying what we're going to do this fall, but I'm smiling," was his closing remark.

Philadelphia Newspaper Suspends.
Philadelphia, June 17.—Frank A. Munsey, millionaire magazine owner and proprietor of newspapers in several American cities, has decided to discontinue the publication of his Philadelphia newspaper, the Evening Times, in a statement published in the Times. Mr. Munsey announces that yesterday's issue of that paper was its last, and admits the failure of his enterprise in the newspaper field in Philadelphia.

Thaw Denies He Will Flee.
Gorham, N. H., June 17.—In a signed statement, Harry K. Thaw denies a report that he was planning to leave the country. "The only place I am going is to Pittsburgh," he said. "As soon as I get permission I am going home to be with my family and look after my business interests. I have no intention whatever of going abroad. Any statement to that effect is fabricated."

Quite Mechanical.
"Yes," said Mrs. Twickenbury, "my daughter has published several poems, but all of them autonomously."—Christian Register.

WILSON'S IDEA OF THE FLAG

To Stand For Just Use of Power, He Says.

Washington, June 17.—Waving his hat toward an American flag hoisted by a squad of bluejackets, President Wilson told a great crowd assembled before the state, war and navy building to celebrate Flag Day that the banner of the future was "meant to stand for the just use of undisputed national power."

"No nation," he said, "is ever going to doubt our power to assert its right and we should lay it to heart that no nation shall ever henceforth doubt our purpose to put it to the highest uses to which a great emblem of justice and government can be put."

"It is henceforth to stand for self possession, for dignity, for the assertion of the right of one nation to serve the other nations of the world—an emblem that will not descend to be used for purposes of aggression and self-aggrandizement; that is too great to be debased by selfishness; that has indicated its right to be honored by all nations of the world and feared by none who do righteousness."

To Lighten Shamrock.

Gosport, Eng., June 17.—It is understood that Charles E. Nicholson, designer of Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrock IV, purposes to remove about four tons of lead from the keel of the new challenger for the America's cup. He thinks this will materially increase the speed of the yacht.

Two Earthquake Shocks In California

Oxnard, Cal., June 17.—Two distinct earthquake shocks were felt here, but no damage was reported. The quake was accompanied by a grinding, ripping noise, which awakened nearly every person in the town.

VILLA TO GROOM ARMY LIKE OURS

Buying 20,000 Uniforms Much
Like American Soldiers'.

RESEMBLANCE IN HATS ALSO

Agent Sent to United States to Purchase Equipment For Once Ragged Fighters Defines Rebel Plan For Land Distribution In Mexico—"Carranza and Villa Without Selfish Aims."

General Francisco Villa's army, which has already been a ragged, barefooted aggregation, is soon to be the best groomed lot of soldiers that ever has been seen west of Vera Cruz.

An agent, who visited his identity to remain a secret said in an interview in New York that he was buying all sorts of equipment for the armies of General Villa and General Natera. He mentioned incidentally that General Natera's first name has been misspelled frequently in the American newspapers. Neither "Panophile" nor "Panofilia" Natera is in Zacatecas, but General Panfilo Natera, who is the commander of the Constitutional army at that place.

"I am buying 20,000 uniforms and large quantities of shoes, hats and saddles," said the agent. "The uniforms of the soldiers of the Constitutional army are being renewed every two months. The uniforms are of olive drab khaki, with riding breeches and puttees, much like the uniform of the American soldier."

Buys 23,000 Pairs of Shoes.

"Of shoes I have already contracted for 23,000 pairs, which are to be delivered at the rate of a carload every twenty-five or thirty days. Besides, I am buying saddles. These I am getting where I can—a thousand here, 2,000 there, and so on. Then, I have given big orders for hats, which are much like your regulation army hat, except that they have air holes in them. All these things are shipped to Juarez, whence they will be forwarded to General Villa and General Natera."

"I notice that a misapprehension seems to have grown up in this country relative to the purpose of the Constitutionalists in dividing up the land in Mexico. A belief seems to have gained currency that General Carranza or General Villa will take the big Terrazas estate and those of the other big landholders and simply cut these up and allot the land to their soldiers. That is far from the truth. Carranza and Villa are without selfish aims. The land that will be taken from the big landholders will be limited to that they have obtained by fraud or coercion from the original owners."

Land to Original Owners.

"Many of the big landowners got their start, like Terrazas, by land awarded for services as generals in the army. I have no doubt that Terrazas, whom I am taking as an example, has a just and correct title to a great deal of his land, and under the constitution of 1857, which we are fighting to restore, it will not be possible to take from a man that which is lawfully his. "But the great bulk of these estates consists of land that was taken unlawfully from men whose families had possessed it for generations. Sometimes federal soldiers were called in to assist in the stripping. As far as possible such land will be restored to its original owners. But the bulk of the land which it will be made possible for such as wish to pursue agriculture to own is land which is still held by the Mexican government and has never been deeded to anybody. Of this there are millions of acres."

"The Constitutionalists aim at a government founded upon justice. Whenever the Constitutionalists have taken a town they have restored to office the officials who were in power at the time of the death of Madero."

Quarantine Against Sugar Cane.

The importation from foreign countries, Hawaii and Porto Rico of living sugar cane, cuttings or parts of the cane has been prohibited by the United States department of agriculture under authority given it by the plant quarantine act. This action has been made necessary by the discovery that these canes are likely to be infected with insect pests and fungous diseases from which the United States is fortunately free.

FIRST PEACE PROTOCOL.

The first of the peace protocols between the United States and Mexico signed by the representatives of this country and of General Huerta provides:

First.—That a provisional government shall succeed the present government of Mexico.

Second.—The laws of the present government shall be the laws of the provisional government.

Third.—It shall be the first duty of the new government to repress all hostilities, to maintain order and prepare the country for an election, at which all federal officers of the government shall be chosen by the people, and shall constitute the chief executive officers of the provisional government.

Reparation.

Queer Things That Turn Up In the News

York, Pa., reports a pig shaped like a letter Y, with two backbones, eight legs, four ears and two tails.

The heat melted varnish on chairs in a Pottsville (Pa.) theater, and several hundred women wearing white dresses were glued to their seats.

In deciding a damage case at Newport News, Va., the jury found its members entertaining so many different ideas that the seven amounts suggested were added and the amount divided by seven for an average, which was awarded.

A woman who compels her husband to cook his breakfast is guilty of cruel and inhuman treatment. The supreme court of Minnesota has affirmed a jury verdict granting a divorce to a husband who for several years got his own breakfast.

LATEST WAY TO DANCE IS JUST TO CANTER.

Masters Put Ban on Wiggle, Trot and Dip and Favor the Wave.

Down with the "lame duck" and the "horse trot." The "canter" is the thing. The national dance masters in convention at Cleveland, O., decreed it so.

According to the dancing masters, the new dances will work a change in the styles for women's gowns. The new steps will smack of the minuet and other old fashioned dances and will result in the elimination of the narrow skirts.

The "canter" is the opposite of the "lame duck," in which the duck is done by bending or dragging the man's right leg and his partner's left one. To canter the man rises on the ball of his left foot and his partner on the left foot, giving a syncopated effect to the dance on every other step. It's fitted either to the canstep or the hesitation.

The dancing masters also announce they are getting close to a solution of the problem of eliminating the wiggle and the dip in their efforts to tame down the new dances. The dancers hereafter will wave instead.

"The wave is pretty and graceful," said R. F. Wood of Chicago, in charge of the elementary ballroom work at the convention. "The wave is obtained by a cross step with the feet. The body lists naturally waves by being drawn slightly to the side to follow the foot that is extended."

As denatured by the dancing masters devotees of the tango and the maxixe will hardly recognize those dances. Ten steps of the tango as presented and five steps of the maxixe received the seal of approval, but there's nothing sensational left in the dances. The maxixe steps were accepted only under the agreement that they were to be used in combination with other steps to suit each dancing master.

THE CORONATION STONE.

Historic Reasons For Veneration of Relic Damaged by Suffragettes.

The partial success of the suffragette attempt to blow up England's ancient coronation chair has been followed by an outbreak of public indignation similar in its intensity to that which would follow an effort to destroy our own Liberty bell with an explosive. Not even the crown jewels in the Tower are so intimately involved with the story of English sovereignty and the tradition of the divine right of kings since David of Israel.

The chair of oak contains the stone of Scone, which Edward I. brought from Scotland in 1297 in token of the subjugation of that country. This stone was the emblem of power of the native rulers of Scotland. Legend has it that it was used by the patriarch Jacob for a pillow. It is more than possible, says the Philadelphia Ledger, that it is the stone on which the dying head of the sainted Columba rested in the abbey of Iona. It is a piece of sandstone similar to the characteristic formation of the west coast of Scotland. From the time of Edward I. every English monarch has been crowned in this chair.

From the account of Adam, the king's goldsmith, in 1309, it appears that the chair originally was to have been cast in bronze. Royal thrift changed the plan, and the woodwork cost 100 shillings. Master Walker, the king's painter, made it instead. Early in the nineteenth century the "old crockets and turrets at the back were sawn off," and the design of the back has been so often varnished that only a part of the sovereign's figure remains, the lion on which his feet rested having disappeared. The lions under the chair itself are modern and were refigured for the coronation of Edward VII.

The High Cost of Compliments.

"You have a fine cow, madam," said a well dressed stranger to Mrs. Mary Cammer of Mount Vernon, N. Y. "Indeed, she is all of that. Her milk is half cream," answered the woman. The young man patted the cow and, picking up some grass, thrust it under the nose of Mrs. Cammer—not the cow. The woman lapsed into unconsciousness. When she came to $300 she had in her waist was gone. A handkerchief soaked with chloroform lay on the grass.

Kindness.

No one thing does human life more need than a kind consideration of the faults of others. Everyone sins; everyone needs forbearance. Our own imperfections should teach us to be merciful.—Henry Ward Beecher.

WHERE WERE YOU AT 24 O'CLOCK?

Just Supposing There Really
Was Such an Hour.

IDEA INSPIRES A HUMORIST

He Writes of the Possibilities Were the Proposed Reform Suggested to International Chambers of Commerce Taken Seriously—Eight Hour Work-day Would Be Over by Noon.

Ancient the proposal before the international chambers of commerce in Paris to reorganize clocks so they will have twenty-four hours instead of twelve, the Washington Star runs a humorous story as follows:

President William F. Gude of the chamber of commerce is in favor of the twenty-four hour clock. He agrees with the scientific theory that a man will go to bed at a quarter past 19 when he would roar hoarsely if asked to retire at fifteen minutes after 7. Then, the man will get up earlier in the morning, and the unhealthy night life will be ended and the millennium will have come.

Of course there are other ways of getting up early. There is the alarm clock, which is set for 6:45 and misses its guess by three hours and has every one bounding out of bed in the dead of night and speculating whether a burglar or the day of judgment has arrived. Then, there is the eight day clock, so named because it takes eight days to run the week out. It sneaks in a day on you.

Why Two Twelves?

"But all of these," said Mr. Gude, "are idealities. They are based on the same idea that two twelves are better than twenty-four. Why should there be a 12 m and a 12 p. m. when everybody knows that the day begins and ends at midnight?"

"Still," said the interviewer, "the thing has a horrible sound. Think of telling a friend you got home the night before at twenty-seven minutes after 23."

President Gude declined to follow this line of thought.

"Young people," he said, "should get to bed early. If a twenty-four hour clock will help them, then they should have it." And he added:

"If everybody saw the sun come up in the morning this world would be a better place."

"But some of them do," suggested the interviewer. "I know a club member who always waits up for the sun, and sometimes he sees two or three of them coming up, and—"

"That is not what I mean," said Mr. Gude severely.

With Dr. Alfred Georg of Switzerland and William Whit of London. President Gude wants to walk forth into the garden, Mand, as the little birds twitter and the musical crash of the milkman's can sounds afar in the fresh, sweet air. No member of the chamber of commerce will fight the reform, either, unless he wants people to ask him where he puts in his evenings.

When these clocks get to working right it is easy to realize what a marvelous place this city will be. Why, the noon editions of certain newspapers will be selling on the streets the night before! Lots of befuddled individuals will be keeping appointments on the exact hour, but two or three days behind.

Problem For Union Men.

The union man who insists upon his eight hour day will be through by noon. He will start to work at 4 a. m., and he will certainly have a grand time trying to "kill" the rest of the day.

The only bad feature is that they will move up the baseball game so it will interfere with lunch. But, then, a person who gets up at 4 o'clock a. m. doesn't deserve lunch.

There will be little trouble with the clocks, Mr. Gude believes. Some of these chimes that the hotels install may grow tedious when they begin to harmonize on 24 o'clock. It will sound too much like a musical act in vaudeville.

But discontented guests can remember that at 24 o'clock they will have done most of their sleeping. "What about these chambers of commerce dinners?" Mr. Gude was asked.

"We might change them into breakfasts," he suggested.

"You favor the twenty-four hour day?" This question had been asked before, but any right minded interviewer always asks the same question six times before he goes away.

"I do," said Mr. Gude. "I favor anything that will make people get up early and go to bed early."

SHE MAY RUN FOR CONGRESS.

Friends Ambitious to Send Mrs. Brown of Newport to Washington.

Colorado may yet be distinguished by having a representative in congress who spends the summers at Newport. R. L. Suffragists, according to reports, are importuning Mrs. J. J. Brown to make the race for congress.

Mrs. Brown expects to go back to Denver about September, which would be just in time for the primaries. By that time, her friends say, the movement to make her "the lady from Colorado" may be so organized that she will have to enter the race.

He Knew They Would.

Spacer—"I believe that if Shakespeare were alive at the present time and trying to live by his pen in London the comic papers would reject many of his best jokes." Humorist—"I know it. I have tried 'em all."

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

GREEN PEAS.

WASH the pods of peas before shelling them. Then the peas need not be washed. When crisp and plump peas are delicious.

Put them into a colander and sift out the fine particles before boiling. Old peas may be made tender by extra cooking, or they may be rubbed through a sieve before serving.

Always break the hulls of peas with the teeth before swallowing them. Otherwise they are indigestible.

Cooked With Cabbage.

Green Peas and Cabbage.—Wash a new cabbage and a few lettuce leaves, a handful of parsley and three or four green onions. Cut into shreds and put into a saucepan with a pint and a half of green peas and a piece of butter. Cover the pan and allow to cook over a slow fire, stirring occasionally to prevent burning. A double saucepan is the best for this. When well cooked season with pepper and salt and serve on a hot dish.

Peas With Mint.—Drop fresh young peas into boiling water with sprigs of mint. Cook, uncovered, until tender. Add half a teaspoonful of powdered sugar, butter and salt to taste and cream if desired.

Green Pea Salad.—Drain liquid from a cupful and a half of well seasoned cold cooked green peas and chill them. When ready to prepare the salad mix with the peas half a cupful of carrot grated raw, reserving a little to garnish the top. Cover with mayonnaise or a cooked dressing. Serve at once on crisp lettuce leaves.

A Nice Salad.

Vegetable Salad.—Take one cupful of cold peas, one cupful of cold beets, cut in cubes; two cupfuls of boiled potatoes; half of a small onion, chopped fine; six small cucumber pickles, sliced fine; one dozen olives, cut in small pieces; one teaspoonful of salt, the whites of two hard boiled eggs, cut fine. Put all together in a large bowl.

Make dressing as follows: Take two yolk of a raw egg and two teaspoonfuls of well mixed mustard. To these add gradually half a pint of olive oil, a spoonful at a time, mixing well with a silver spoon. When mixed it should be the consistency of whipped cream. Thin with one tablespoonful of vinegar. Turn on vegetables, mix lightly with spoon and set on ice until ready to serve.

Burnt Clay For Highways.

Burnt clay for surfacing highways in Iowa has been proposed by the state highway commission. It is stated that burnt clay has been used in a number of counties in the state with satisfactory results. The establishment of a plant at Fort Madison for the burning of clay has been proposed.

THE BOOT-TOP TUNIC, ONE OF THE MOST FAVORED OF FASHION DETAILS

It seems as though the long tunic had become popular over night; one day we hear whispers that long Russian over-skirts are to be used again and the next day we meet them at every turn. There is something chic and becoming about them but most of all, no doubt, it is the fact of their being so strikingly different from the narrow, skimpy skirts of the last few seasons, that makes them appeal so strongly.

In this illustration we see the tunic applied to a plain little frock of dark blue gabardine. The three-piece foundation skirt narrows down to the modish width about the feet, while the overskirt flares most satisfactorily above. The bodice is a kimono design worn over a long-sleeved gimpie. This costume requires for size 36, 5 3/4 yards of 36-inch material.

In the second frock (8402), is shown one of the new basques developed in black taffetas and trimmed with a row of novel buttons, a quaint collar and a little flaring sections at the bottom of the sleeves. The skirt shows a slight draping at the back and a three-piece tunic. Although somewhat severe there is something pleasing in the straight lines of this basque and it would not be surprising if they became very popular a little later in the season.

To copy this frock in size 36, 5 3/4 yards of 36-inch material is needed. No. 8387, sizes 34 to 42. No. 8402, sizes 34 to 42. Each pattern 15 cents.

To obtain either pattern illustrated cut out this coupon and enclose 15 cents in stamps or coin. Be sure to state number of pattern and size, measuring over the fullest part of the bust. Address Pattern Department, care of this paper.

World's Largest Apartment House.

A. F. Leitch, architect of this city, states that his home town, Newark, N. J., will soon boast of the largest apartment house in the world. Ground has been broken for a building to be 13 stories high in front and 15 stories in the rear. The building will be located at 742-48 High street, with a frontage of 105 feet on that street and a depth of 225 feet. The construction cost will be $850,000. A lane from Spruce street to the rear of the building will run to a private garage, capable of accommodating 100 automobiles. There will be a palm room, a social room, a ballroom and a restaurant on the thirteenth floor. The restaurant will accommodate 400 diners at one time. A roof garden, covering the entire structure, will be a feature of the building.—Wall Street Journal.

Dying Aviator's Nerve.

The power of the will to control a badly injured body was never better illustrated than in the case of Doctor Constantin, a volunteer aviator in the service of the Bulgarian army, who was fatally wounded by a Turkish bullet while sailing his aeroplane over the trenches at Tchataldja. Notwithstanding the shock, the pain and the rapid hemorrhage, Doctor Constantin kept his nerve and was able to turn his aeroplane around, guide it back to the Bulgarian lines and volplane safely down among his friends. He died as the aeroplane reached the ground.

Biblical Proof.

An old negro, who was the only Baptist in the neighborhood, always "stuck up for his own faith," and was ready with a reason for it, although he was unable to read a word. This was the way he "put 'em down." "Yo' kin read, now, kaint you?" "Yes," "Well, I s'pose yo' read de Bible, kaint you?" "Yes." "Yo' read 'bout John de Baptist, kaint you?" "Yes." "Well, yo' never read 'bout John de Mefodis, did yo'?"

Jumping the Tracks.

It seems to be normal in people to crave abnormal experiences. The trouble with taking a fling, as one sometimes terms a light indiscretion, is that it coarsens the timber and fiber of personality. Growth is the only thing worth while in experience, and folly is never a direct road to any goal.—Los Angeles Times.

Words and Thought.

"The gift of words" is sometimes spoken of disparagingly by "practical" men. But words are merely the symbols of ideas, and nobody really has the gift of words who has not also the gift of thought. Before one can talk with power he first must be able to think. There never was a great speaker who was not also a real thinker.

Willing to Help.

"Mr. Editor, we are trying to start a movement to establish a home for disabled poets." "Fine," said the editor. "There is a whole bunch of poets in this town that I will disable as soon as you are ready for them."

Fix Your Gaze on Swift Oblivion.

Does some bubble of fame torment you? Then fix your gaze on swift oblivion, on the gulf of infinity this way and that, on the empty rattle of plaudits and the undiscriminating fickleness of professional applause, on the narrow range within which you are circumscribed. The whole earth is but a point, your habitation but a tiny nook thereon; and on the earth how many are there who will praise you?—Marcus Aurelius.

Suspended Animation.

"Have you ever known any cases of suspended animation?" asked the young woman with an inquiring mind. "Yes," replied Senator Sorghum. "Examples of suspended animation are presented by some of the most interesting laws on our statute books."

Changed.

First Chorus Lady—What do you think, dear? George is back from Alaska, stone broke and so altered that you would hardly know him!

Second Chorus Lady—I'm sure I shan't, dear.—Judge.

Real Test.

A well-behaved man never knows whether his wife loves him or not. But let him commit a crime, and she will not only proclaim her affection, but she will stand by him in a manner to attract the attention and admiration of the civilized world.—Tospeka Capital.

Really a Good Idea.

"Is your wife going to wear her diamonds to the grand opera?" "Of course," answered Mr. Munro. "We can't all appreciate music, and we ought to try to make grand opera interesting even for those who go merely to look on."

Easy To Darken

Your Gray Hair

You can Bring Back Color and

Lustre with Sage Tea

and Sulphur

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is messy and troublesome. For 50 cents you can buy any drug store the ready-to-use tonic called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant. You will also discover dandruff is gone and hair has stopped falling.

Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur and look years younger.

The story is a direct narrative of a fancied incompatibility between a self-made, iron-willed man and the humble, home-loving wife of his early struggles.

CHAPTER IX.

Thirty years of one way of living becomes a habit—so much so that it is almost a human impossibility to adjust oneself to any other mode of life. Mary Slade, living year after year with Dan Slade, interested in his work, watching him rise and succeed, had come to think of the man as only another part of herself. With him out of her life she felt as if a part of her own body had vanished without which she was restless and ill at ease.

As she sat in the little old cottage where with Dan she started out on married life, she experienced a feeling of detachment as if either this were not the right place, but some sort of inferior substitute, or as though the real and vital part of herself were absent.

The room was just the same as it was the day she and Dan had walked out of it to take up their new life in the handsome mansion in town. Not a thing had been changed or disturbed. The same crooked hatrack, with her old knitted shawl hanging on one hook, hung behind the door. The same well-worn ties were carefully pinned on the plush-upholstered chairs. The same cheap little ornaments that so delighted Mary's simple heart in the old days still cluttered the mantel. The same near-crystal crowded the sideboard. The tablecloth remained laid from meal to meal after the time-saving custom of middle-class families.

Everything was the same but the atmosphere of contentment that once filled the room; everything the same but Mary's happiness in her husband's love. Outside the window the rose bush Dan had helped her to plant still nodded and blossomed in the sunshine that poured in a flood of golden joy through the windows of the shabby room and emphasized all the worn places in the comfortable old chair where evening after evening Dan Slade had sat reading his newspaper and dreaming of the great future he was confident the fates held in store for him.

In spite of herself Mary's thoughts were of her husband—the first bitter thoughts she had ever harbored against the man. She turned sick at heart at the thought of it. Dan and herself estranged, hopelessly at odds, fighting each other in the divorce court, fighting even over the possession of the little cottage that had shared in the first happy flush of their youthful love and happiness. This, the only place where she could find peace in her loneliness, Dan was trying to wrest from her. It was too near to town, too near to the scene of his new activities, he had sent word to her. She must vacate. She must go so far away that his charge of "desertion" would stand fire in a court of law.

Face to face with the fact that Dan was trying to drive her even from this shelter, trying to drive her out into a strange and alien world, of which she knew nothing and which knew nothing of her, Mary could scarcely believe that Dan was so changed—that even now he would be willing to snatch away from her the place which she held the memory of happier days.

She had not seen her husband since the night in Senator Strickland's library, when the awful knowledge had been forced home to her that he not only wanted a permanent separation, but insisted on having an absolute divorce. Over and over again a thought came into the woman's mind. It was intuitive, instinctive. Try as she might to silence it, she could not put it out of her thoughts. It was that ever-recurring feeling that another woman had entered Dan's mind and heart. Again and again she pushed it from her, but always and ever the obsession clung to her like a black shadow that haunted her during the day and persisted even in her dreams at night.

From the kitchen came the voice of her maid-of-all-work singing an old-fashioned tune.

It was one that in her young days Dan had loved to hear her sing—one whose sweet melody and melancholy sentiment he had loved in the days before his heart had become hard and his mind intense on the cold, hard problems of finances and political advancement. It was the song in which all lovers from the beginning to the end of time find a responsive note: "Nita, Juanita, be my own fair bride."

Conscious of the song, Mary remembered the lamb stew that she had left cooking on the kitchen fire. Dan had always loved lamb stew; that is, her lamb stew. She remembered how heartily he always ate of it, how he never failed to pass his plate for a second "helping," and how he used to look up at her and say:

"This is lapping good, Mary. I think I will have a bit more."

Just as if he needed any urging! Mary found her thoughts growing very tender when she suddenly remembered that tonight she must sit down alone at the table, that instead of two she would only serve one plateful of that stew. Her heart contracted with a pathetic, futile longing for things as "they used to be," and grew bitter as she remembered conditions as they were. She sat with her face pillowed on her arms, so absorbed in her unhappy reflections that she didn't hear the door open, didn't hear a step until someone leaned over and kissed her tenderly on the faded cheek that Dan used to pat so lovingly and declare was lovelier than their garden roses.

"Oh, Rob!" Mary exclaimed, starting up in glad surprise. "I didn't hear you drive up."

"I didn't," Bob laughed, good-naturedly. "My car is stranded two blocks back," and he threw his linen duster on the sofa as Mary hastened to her fond little way to take his hand and hover about him.

"It's strange how near town this place seems to be," Bob rattled on. "When we lived here before it was clear out in the country, but with a motor car it's right next door to town."

"Well, aunty," and he stretched himself out in an easy chair, "I suppose it's like heaven to you to get back here to the old home you lived in so many years?"

"Yes," Mary agreed, rather indifferently.

"Any of the old neighbors left, I'd like to see them—some of 'em."

"I never noticed before how many questions old neighbors could ask, Rob," Mary sighed, as she recounted the curious visits of her old friends, who had inquired anxiously and repeatedly for Mr. Slade, how he was getting on, and when he would be down, and a dozen other questions in the phraseology of people who, as old friends, take the liberty of coming as near as possible to demanding that you unburden your soul to them on the spot. "You'll kind of have to dodge 'em, Bob. I don't know when I've lied so. What do you think of a man who forces a woman to lie?"

"Well," Hayes hated the old subject, hated the thought of Mary dwelling continually on her unhappiness. "Didn't they know about Slade?" and he began to toy with the spoons of thread that Mary had been using for the inevitable sewing that had so annoyed her husband.

"Either they don't know or they want to find out more than they already know," Mary answered, wearily. "So I sit here lying and lying."

"You intend to stick it out and stay here?"

"Yes," Mary answered with a quiet determination.

"Well, he can't call this desertion," Hayes went on. "You own this house together. It's your home as well as his."

"Yes," agreed Mary, "but it's awful fighting my husband. What's the matter with you, Bob? You used to tell me a lot about Miss Strickland, and lately you—have you had any trouble?" she asked, kindly, forgetting her own sorrow at the thought of the possible unhappiness of this young man whom she loved as tenderly as if he had been her own son.

"Don't let us talk about her," Bob objected.

"All right, Robert," Mary attempted to be cheery as she saw how abstracted and dejected Bob was. "Dinner will be ready in a minute and you can sit right down."

"I won't give in to him!" she declared as she put on an extra plate and knife and fork. "I'll never give him that divorce."

"Don't you ever think of anything else?" Hayes questioned, soberly.

"No; it's no use, Robert; I get hot and cold hating my husband when I think how he is treating me. I know it's wrong, but I do! Sometimes when I wake up suddenly in the night and see the old room and remember that he's living at his club and enjoying life and me here miserable, I just get sick hating him."

"Now, aunty!"—Hayes was anxious to divert her attention—"I wouldn't think of that. You have the best of him. You've got him beaten. I have a good lawyer for you, and he'll be out to see you today. You know I'd take the case myself, but it wouldn't be professional. You've positively made up your mind to fight the divorce to a finish?"

"Tooth and nail!" Mary's answer came through set teeth.

"Then you've got him. He can't fight a woman in the courts in his position, with his nomination before him."

"I've got him, have I?" Mary was all eagerness now.

"You're sure of it? Was he very mad about my coming here? Has my lawyer seen his lawyer?"

Hayes answered the last of her many questions first. "They met today."

"Did you get me two lawyers, Rob?"

"Yes, I got two. I got a whole firm."

"Do you think I need another—so's to be sure?"

Hayes laughed.

"You have all you need, aunty."

"Thank God, I got the telephone in so they can call me up," Mary was almost feverish in her excitement. "I couldn't go on the witness stand. He doesn't know that, though. Any signs of Dan going back to the house, now I'm out of it?"

The bell that never hesitates to interrupt at any moment rang insistently. Mary jumped about in her excitement and finally took down the receiver. She dropped it as hastily and backed away.

"You'd better answer it, Rob."

"It's Slade," Bob declared, holding his hand over the transmitter. "He wants to talk to you."

"No, sirree!" Mary was vehement. "Cut him off! I ain't going to talk to him. I've got two lawyers. Tell him to have his lawyer talk to mine. My heart's so hard against him—I couldn't listen to the sound of my own voice," and she sank weakly into a chair as Hayes continued to converse with Slade. "No," she says not, he was saying, "No, I am not out here winding her up or advising her," and he banged up the receiver.

"What'd he say?" Mary was wringing her hands in her uncontrollable excitement.

"Oh, he just called me a skunk and cut off," answered Hayes, as he nonchalantly lighted a cigarette. He paced up and down the room for a moment and then turned on her.

"God! I'd like to haul him through every court in the country. The scoundrel!"

"I don't like to hear you talk like that about him, Rob," Mary remonstrated. "He's been a pretty good friend to you."

"Well, perhaps," Hayes tried to calm herself for her sake. "He's all right, I suppose."

"I damn that he is," Mary's mood was variable. "When I think of that divorce—"

"Slade's coming down here today, aunty. He declares you're here under his very eyes, and he's determined that you shall go away, and desert him and give him the opportunity to divorce you. He says the whole country will know of the trouble unless you go away. That's what he said over the phone."

"Well, I'll stay right here. I can't get over it, Rob," and her voice quivered in spite of herself. "I can't get over the suddenness of it; his wanting that divorce happened just like that," and she snapped her fingers to illustrate her meaning. "Before that he never thought of it. It's curious," she paused, thoughtfully; "do you know that sometimes when I get to thinking about it—something comes over me, an idea that—shut that outside door, Rob," she commanded before she would continue. "I wonder if there isn't—I declare I'm ashamed to say it—but I wonder if it could be possible that there's—some woman," she finally managed to get the word out.

"Aunty!" It was not necessary for Hayes to feign surprise, for, although he knew the situation, he had been confident that such a thought had never entered Mary Slade's pure-minded thoughts.

Value of Fruit Acids.
It is thought that acid fruits induce rheumatism. The contrary is true. Fruit acids taken into the system by a person, who has rheumatism act beneficially, and actually have the effect of increasing the alkalinity of the blood. Experiments have proved this conclusively. Thus a person who has too much uric acid in the blood should for a time eat fruit or acid fruit juices in large quantities.

Immortal Engraving.
If we work upon marble, it will perish. If we work upon brass, time will efface it. If we rear temples, they will crumble into dust. But if we work upon immortal souls, if we imbue them with principles, with the just fear of God and love of fellow men, we engrave on those tablets something which will brighten to all eternity.—Daniel Webster.

Idiocy Properly Treated.
Doctor Grouch was going leisurely down street the other evening when a cutup stopped him and asked him to guess a silly riddle. Grouch halted and soaked the cutup in the jaw so hard that he bumped a hole in the sidewalk with his head. There were no arrests.—Kansas City Star.

GUIDANCE FOR CITY GROWTH

Pioneers Today Are the Town Planners.

TOWNS ARE BORN AGAIN.

New and Strange Demands Have Swamped the Facilities of Municipalities Built on the Old Lines—A Proof of Virility, Not of Weakness.

By CHARLES MULFORD ROBINSON
(Author of "The Width and Arrangement of Streets—A Study in Town Planning.")

A famous English landscape architect has just been summoned to Greece to make a city plan for Athens. The explanation is that Athens has been experiencing that growth which in recent years has been so marked a feature of city life throughout the world. She finds it necessary to provide ample facilities for her crowding traffic, new and shorter avenues to the suburban residence districts that are growing up around her, more and larger parks for a larger population, from whom the growing city has been pushing the country farther and farther away.

Athens has been brought face to face with the common, worldwide problem. She could be no more exempt from it than is the railroad junction on the prairie, the mining town of Wales, the clean industrial city of Germany. She has had to send for the city planner, as Topeka lately did; as Calgary, Canada; as Houston, Tex.; and as St. Paul, Minn.

Everywhere the growing city has to meet the problem of readjustment. The boy putting on long trousers takes thought as to his future and is better for doing so. It is equally well and normal for the city to do these things, and all kinds of cities all over the world are doing it.

So it has come about that what is called city planning has developed into one of those rare and epoch-making world movements that are the great milestones of history and that influence civilization.

For hundreds and hundreds of years cities had been cramped inside of encompassing walls. The people were huddled together for defense, and growth of population meant an ever closer crowding. There were no cleared spaces then for playgrounds and parks. The very streets were narrowed to the limit, many becoming no more than mere slits between the walls. This was possible because the towns, being of such restricted area and doing almost no manufacturing, had very little vehicle traffic. If a person rode anywhere he went on horseback, but it was not too far to walk wherever one wanted to go, and there was little freight to be transported.

Then very suddenly there came a series of events that were dramatic in their cumulative effect upon the city. The encircling walls were taken down, and the city could expand. At the same moment there were a development of manufacturing and a building of railroads that brought into the cities a rush of population that forced expansion and choked their streets with freight.

The cities had to expand, and the more area they covered the greater, of course, became the use of vehicular transportation, necessitating new street adjustments. The city boundaries were pushed further and further outward, and as fast as they went the means of transportation improved. The slow and lumbering old stage, or bus, was followed by the horse car, drawn more swiftly and smoothly up a rail. Then came the cable car and then the trolley. A point four miles from the center of town became as near by street car as a point only one mile out had been. As the streets were extended mile upon mile they created a need for parks and open spaces, and these in their turn, absorbing city land, hastened the town's expansion. Now the telephone and automobile have been developed and are facilitating the outward march of the town. It has been well said that there has been more change in urban conditions in the last fifty years than in the 2,000 years preceding.

What wonder that such new and strange demands have swamped the facilities of cities built on the old plan; what wonder that the new and now seriously studied science of city planning is suddenly finding a broad field of usefulness; what wonder that cities everywhere are calling for readjustment and calling the more loudly as they are more progressive. It is a proof of virility, not of weakness, when a community takes up town planning. In Massachusetts, indeed, the legislature has enacted a law requiring every community of 10,000 or more population to have a planning board.

"To make cities," said Henry Drummond—"that is what we are here for, for the city is strategic. It makes the towns; the towns make the villages; the villages make the country. He who makes the city makes the world. After all, though men make cities, it is cities which make men. Whether our national life is great or mean, whether our social virtues are mature or stunted, whether our sons are moral or vicious, whether religion is possible or impossible, depends upon the city." That is the justification of city planning.

WIFE IS TEXAS CONGRESSMAN'S SECRETARY

Thirteen years ago a young Texas lawyer decided to run for congress. This seemed to his wife a reckless, almost a foolhardy thing for him to do, for they were very poor. And as everybody knows, politics is not a poor man's recreation. However, the congressional race once entered, this particular man, John N. Garner, was in to win, and his wife was at his side to help him. Mrs. Garner went into the office that served as campaign headquarters and that was managed by her husband's law partner. She did clerical work and any other sort of work that happened to be needed, going about her duties as clerk and assistant campaign manager in a quiet, businesslike way.

This was 13 years ago, as has been said. Representative Garner has now been a member of the house of representatives for 12 years. During this time his only secretary has been his wife. Mrs. Garner learned typewriting and shorthand in order to fill the position. She has a business office in her home, and, unlike most women who are also home makers, she works by businesslike methods.

His force, when he "set up" eight years ago, consisted of himself and a second-hand machine in the back of his store. Today there are ten girls simply to sort the mail received, which every day amounts to thousands of letters.

When the contest was on, more than a year ago, in Michigan Lindquist determined to come to congress. He wanted this country to have a pure fabric law as regards goods and leather, similar to that passed for pure food. To make himself known he sent out by mail hundreds of thousands of personal letters, and the result placed him in congress.

Wishing to enlist the aid of the president, Lindquist went to the White House last fall with a box of samples of adulterated goods. But the secret service officer stopped him at the door, and it was only by displaying his wares that he secured an entrance.

"The next time I go," he explained, "I will take my goods in an open-work hamper."

He succeeded so well that he is now the president of a large men's clothing concern.

BRIDGES AND APPROACHES

Modern Structures Neither Durable Nor Artistic.

ANCIENTS BUILT WELL.

To Achieve the Proper Result the Engineer Should Co-operate With the Architect in the Design of the Bridge and Its Approaches.

By FRANK KOESTER.

(Consulting civil engineer Hudson Terminal building, New York, and author of "Modern City Planning and Maintenance.")

Of all the structures erected the bridge is possessed of the greatest individuality, unity and feeling. It is at once an inspiration and a utility, and it marks as no other structure does the progress of man from barbarism to civilization. It is one of his greatest triumphs over nature's obstacles, for it is not only an evidence of his ability to merely construct—that is, to place one stone upon another—but of his ability to think and so to utilize the forces of nature as to cause one stone to stand upon another with nothing directly beneath.

A building can never produce the sense of unity of the bridge and thus can never inspire as the bridge does, because, while portions of a building may be eliminated and still leave it a building, the elimination of a portion of a bridge means its destruction for the purposes for which it is erected.

The bridge occupies thus a unique position among the structures of man, approached only by the dam, to which, however, it is far superior, since the dam always lacks in the sense of self evident security which the bridge imparts.

Not only is the bridge unique in its position among structures, but it is the largest single structure erected by man and the most costly. It is also highly important in point of numbers and in the investment involved. There are, for example, some 80,000 metal bridges in the United States, or one for every three miles of railroad, and they aggregate 1,400 miles in length representing an investment of $800,000,000, or several times the cost of the Panama canal. The subject of bridges is therefore one which demands the most careful attention of all who have to deal with it. It is not a subject which should be reserved to the officials and engineers in charge, but is one in which the public should take an active and decisive interest. When a bridge of any consequence is to be erected the designs should be open to public inspection and all objections and suggestions should be dealt with in advance.

The pleasing psychological and aesthetic effect of bridges has been recognized since the earliest times, but great bridges are a result of modern invention, being dependent upon the cheap production of steel for their evolution, since stone bridges have never been constructed in anything like the great spans of the modern steel bridges. The railroad, too, has greatly increased the necessity for bridges, so that except for the comparatively small stone bridges of ancient and medieval times, the principles of which were early mastered bridge building is a modern science.

The success achieved has been little less than stupendous in a material and engineering sense, for enormous structures have been erected which meet the demands of traffic and the various conditions which were presented.

In two respects, however, the modern bridge is for the most part a great failure. It is neither artistic nor will it have the long life of the ancient bridges. The Romans 2,000 years ago built bridges which are in use today, but no modern metal bridge, even with the most careful attention, can be expected to last even a small part of such a period. Even if protected from the action of the elements, the steel which might then be reasonably expected to last indefinitely will be subject to crystallization from the effects of vibration. Thus all our steel bridges are temporary structures. This, however, will in the most cases prove a matter of congratulation, as when they pass away they will be undoubtedly replaced by more artistic structures. Only our stone bridges, however, may be expected to endure into the era of new races if such are to succeed us.

KILLING HIS MAN

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1914, by Associated Literary Press.

There was peace in war—that is, the armies were in winter quarters, with miles of neutral ground between, and except for a little skirmishing along the front there was rest for half a million men.

"Have you ever killed a man?"

Of a sudden, as he lay dozing on his bed in camp one day, Private Hollins asked this question of himself. When the war was over and he returned home he would be asked the question. His friends and neighbors wouldn't be satisfied with his record of battles, but would sweep it aside and say:

"Yes, we know you were in five or six battles and that you fired hundreds of bullets at the enemy, but can you truthfully say you ever brought a man down?"

He couldn't say it, and he felt that he would lose caste. This feeling brought a sudden resolve. It was a resolve that startled him at first, but the more he thought of it the more determined he was to carry it out. He would kill a man. He would do it next time he went on picket.

"This is your post, Hollins," said the corporal as he left him one afternoon, at the edge of a wood under a large oak. "We don't know exactly where the enemy's picket is, but it's some where around that log house."

"Today I shall kill a man," said Private Hollins as he was left alone, and he began his preparations at once. At long rifle shot away across an old cotton field was a long house with a few fruit trees standing about it. One might be sure the farmer was off to war and that wife and children, if they had not abandoned the place, were having a miserable existence. Hollins crept down to the fringe of bushes on his side of the field and peered and watched and waited like an Apache in ambush. For an hour he saw nothing. Then a faint light came among the trees and trotted about in the open in a sneaking fugitive way. If the dog was there the house must be inhabited. He had just come to this conclusion when he caught sight of a figure among the trees. It was between the house and the bushes where he believed the enemy's picket was lying. It must be the picket on his way to and from the well. Perhaps he had gone to the house to light his pipe or boil his coffee. There was a glimpse and it was gone. Another glimpse, another hiding, and then the figure was fair to view. It was a long shot, but a pretty fair target, and with an instant's hesitation he drew up his gun and fired. When he looked over the smoke the figure was gone.

"But I know I hit him, and he's lying dead on the grass!"

"Now I can tell them at home that I killed a man! Mighty long shot, but I dropped him for sure."

The dog was still in the open. As the shot rang out he looked back among the trees. As the echoes died away he turned his head toward Hollins and bowed dimly. A moment later and the figure of a young girl appeared beside the dog. She was bareheaded, barefooted and not over eight years old. Hesitating for only a moment she began advancing across the field. The smoke from the soldier's musket had located him. The dog followed at her heels, head and tail down, and with surprise Hollins watched the girl's approach. It took her five minutes to cross the field. She came straight at him as he stood up among the bushes, and when she reached him she extended her hand and clasped his and said:

"Come along, you!"

He rested his musket against a log and permitted her to lead him into the open and across the field. He did not ask where she was leading him. Not a question passed his lips, nor did she speak further. Straight across the field to the trees among which his victim had stood, but long before he got there he saw a form on the grass. It was a girl, and by the time she came close up to it, and the girl let go his hand and pointed and said:

"You shot him!"

It wasn't a man lying dead on the grass, soldier or farmer, but a woman. The soldier rubbed his eyes and looked around in a dazed way. A boy of ten and a girl of five came out of the house and stood there and looked from the soldier to the dead woman and back.

"Well?" queried Hollins of the children as they continued to stare at him. They simply pointed to the mother lying dead and uttered no word. The soldier tried to speak again, but he couldn't. With face whiter than the one on the grass, with quivering chin and blinded eyes, he made his way slowly across the old field to his post. As he lurched and staggered he heard a dog howl again, but no one called to him. When he reached his post he sat down on the ground and covered his face with his hands and groaned. An hour later the corporal came with the relief. Hollins was lying on the ground with his arms extended.

"Say, boys," said the corporal as he bent over the body. "I'll be hanged if Dan hasn't gone and killed himself with his own musket! Who'd ever have thought it of him?"

Up there among the trees, standing about with the awe of death upon them, the children had heard the shot and as they looked at each other the girl had whispered:

"Mebbe he's dead too!"

Beautiful, Soft, Fluffy
Hair an Aid to Beauty

Who does not love a head of pretty hair? Some women think it is a gift of nature and envy their more fortunate sisters. If your hair is not fluffy, soft and lustrous; is falling out, streaked, faded, brittle, or full of dandruff and if the scalp itches, do not think it must always be that way, for pretty hair is only a matter of care and proper nourishment of the hair roots. Hair is something like a plant—if neglected it soon withers and dies, while with a little attention it keeps fresh and beautiful.

Parian Sage is a scientific preparation that supplies just the elements needed to invigorate the hair roots and stimulate the hair to grow long, thick, fluffy, soft and lustrous. It removes dandruff with one application and quickly stops itching head and falling hair.

People's Drug Store or any druggist can supply you with Parian Sage—it is inexpensive. You cannot be disappointed with this delightful and helpful hair tonic for the first few days' use will give the hair the beauty and charm of youth.
